Vet Finds Passion and Purpose to Life Through HHV Craft Kits

Orin says he’s come a long way with the help you’ve given him.

For the past few months, U.S. Army veteran Orin has been attending programs and receiving care at the Bay Pines VA hospital in St. Petersburg, Florida. And when he’s finished, he walks across the street to the Help Heal Veterans Craft Center to work on HHV Craft Kits you provide through your generous gifts.

Orin wants to thank you for the help you’ve given him!

“The kits help me keep my sanity, and definitely help keep me sober.”

“I spend most of my spare time now doing crafts. I just can’t get enough of them.”

“They definitely help with my mental issues,” he continues.

“Especially focusing. It really gives me a sense of purpose. The feeling I get when I finish a craft, especially the woodworking, it really helps me keep on track.”

That focus and sense of purpose, and the way HHV Craft Kits help Orin manage his PTSD, have been paying off! He’s already completed work-retraining and substance-abuse programs through the VA, and he’s determined to keep moving forward with his life.

“The kits help me keep my sanity, and they definitely help keep me sober,” he says. “I love them.”

Orin and wounded vets like him have paid a high price for their service to our country … and they’re still paying!

As many as 1 in 5 Iraq War vets suffers post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD) in a given year. About 30 percent of Vietnam War veterans have experienced PTSD.

Your support of HHV helps Orin (above) and thousands of vets like him manage with PTSD, and other mental and emotional health challenges. Thank you!

Your gifts now go further, thanks to Southwest Airlines! See over …
Partnership with Southwest Airlines Means Your Gifts Go Further to Help America’s Vets!

When Southwest Airlines updates its airline fleet, old seats could end up on the trash heap. But thanks to you, the high-quality leather on those seats is now being recycled for a much better purpose: helping America’s sick, injured, and wounded service members and veterans!

In an exciting new partnership, Southwest is donating the leather from old airplane seats to HHV. Production director Chip Purkey and his team of skilled craft workers in our Winchester, California, facility are working busily to turn that leather into medically-proven HHV Therapeutic Craft Kits — like our popular leather bag and wallet kits.

It’s your support of, and confidence in, HHV that makes partnerships like this possible, and your dollars are going further and doing more as a result. Thank you for helping us take advantage of this great opportunity to serve America’s vets!
